CSR CERTIFICATION

The CSR Performance Ladder Certification Standard

Document your performance in Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) to customers, investors and other stakeholders through third party certification.

What is the CSR Performance Ladder Certification?

The CSR Performance Ladder is a certifiable management system standard for Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR). The certification process helps organisations focus on their most significant sustainability issues, manage them effectively, and document their CSR performance through third party certification.

The CSR Performance Ladder standard is based on internationally recognized standards such as the ISO standards. It is therefore ideal for integration into existing management systems and processes. The standard is governed by an independent foundation and a Central Committee of Experts.

Benefits of certification:

- Build trust through independent, third party certification
- Focus on your most significant sustainability issues
- Manage the issues effectively
- Credibly document your CSR performance to stakeholders
- Deliver higher sustainability performance

The standard is based on:

- Sustainability standards: Global Reporting Initiative (GRI), AA 1000 SES, ISO 26000
- Management System standards: ISO 9001, ISO 14001, ISO 45001 and ISO 22001

CSR Performance Ladder Certification

The standard covers the following CSR issues:

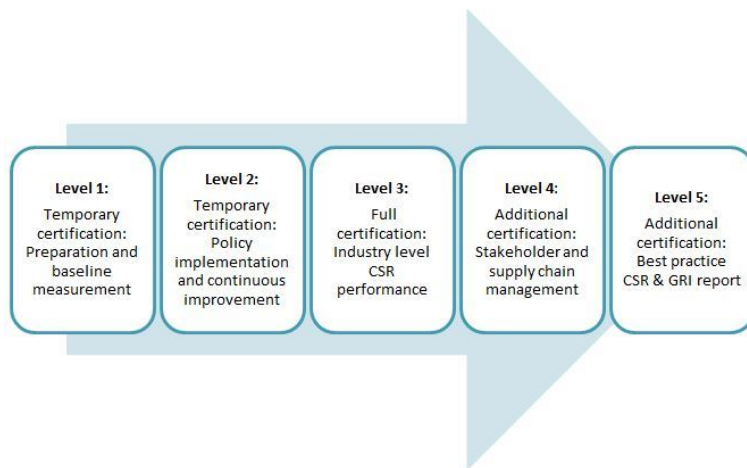

- Organisational governance
- Working conditions and Human rights
- Environment, raw materials, energy and emissions
- Fair operating practice and Consumer issues
- Community involvement and development

Certification process

CSR Performance Ladder consists of five maturity levels. Certification at levels 1&2 are for businesses that are in the early stages of developing a management system for CSR. Level 3 requires an established management system, while Levels 4&5 also includes the entire business value chain and require a sustainability report based on Global Reporting Initiative (GRI).
